Mentone 2012

This year, PRA Chapter 19 met again in Mentone, Indiana to take in the 2012 Conference. There were many people, gyros, helicopters and powered parachutes in attendance this year. A better turnout than the last year.

The weather was not as hot as it can be, so it made being out at the airport that much more enjoyable. It also made flying easier as the density altitude was not as high. Night time was great as the temps made it perfect for sleeping.

I was able to take delivery of my shiny new rotor blades and bring them back home. Ernie sure does a good work, and is a nice guy to boot.

The mornings are always something to see. No one can sleep in late as the sound of Mac's, Rotax's, HKS's and the like wake up everyone who is camping on the field.

Food is available out of the Cantina for breakfast, lunch and dinner and has the expected fair, from eggs, bacon, sausage, pancakes and juice & coffee in the morning to burgers, dogs, fries & nachos in the afternoon to a special for dinner.

To beat the heat, they have a hanger at the end that is closed off for the briefings and the days presentations. The presentations range from discussions on theory to product descriptions, and flight reports to club/organizational meeting.

There is usually a flight that takes off for the morning breakfast run to a nearby airport that has a diner just across the street. The locals are friendly and appreciate the extra business during the convention.

There is always plenty of time to talk with old friends as well as new ones you just made. Just pull up a chair, grab something cold to drink and start the "Hanger Flying", even if you aren't by the hangers.

If you need a blast from the past, the museum on the airport is not huge, but it does hold quite a bit. Admission is included and is worth an hour or two to see what has been flown in the past.

Lets not forget about the merchandise that looks to separate you from some of your money. PRA sells convention shirts, hats, mugs, cozies and old editions of the magazine. Other vendors are on hand selling everything from exhaust springs to used engines. The Amish have shown up the last couple of year with a gas powered ice cream machine and home made pies. A definite stop at least once.

Mentone is always a great trip and is only about five hours away. It's a trip I look forward to each year. One year, I would like to fly in, but that will need to wait till I have a few more hours under my belt.
